Children's Medical Center Health & Safety Tip of the Week

Limit Kids' Screen Time

How many hours does your child spend watching TV, playing video games, or using the computer? The number may startle you. Research shows kids ages eight to eighteen spend four hours a day watching TV, and another two hours on the computer or playing video games. Limit screen time this summer. Keep screens out of bedrooms. Don't watch TV during meals. Experts from the Center for Obesity and its Consequences in Health, or "Coach" clinic at Children's offer this advice: Model good behavior as a parent by leading an active lifestyle. Make family time physical activity time. Help to facilitate physical activity among your child's friends. And limit screen time to no more than two hours a day.
